Red-necked Falcon

State of Indian’s Birds

Red-necked Falcon (Falco chicquera) is a migratory bird native to India. The bird is known for its distinctive red neck and white plumage. It is classified under the family Falconidae and is found mainly in the Indian subcontinent.

Occurrence in India

- Habitat: Wetlands, riversides, and agricultural areas
- Distribution: Mostly found in the central and northern parts of India

Population Trends

- Conservation Status: Vulnerable
- Population: Estimated to be around 500 individuals

Threats

- Habitat loss
- Climate change
- Hunting

Conservation Efforts

- Protection: Under the Wildlife (Protection) Act, 1972
- Research: Ongoing studies to understand its migration patterns

Translation

Translated by: Swetashree Purohit and Kamal Lochan Purohit